

Driving Kind

Read the tips provided in our guide to help make the roads a happier and kinder place to be.

Disclaimer: The information provided in this guide is for general information purposes only and is correct to the best of our knowledge and belief on the date first accessed by you. While we have taken reasonable measures to ensure the accuracy of the information presented, neither KINTO UK Limited nor the author can be held liable for any actions, omissions or consequences resulting from use or reliance on this information. Any information contained within this document does not constitute legal, financial, or professional advice and should not be relied upon as such.

Driving Kind

Kindness is probably not one of the words that might come to mind when you think about driving. We are all likely to have felt some frustrations when we are stuck in traffic, or when someone has shown little courtesy to us by cutting us up.

Here are some tips for you to consider which can help make the roads a happier and kinder place to be:

1. Allow yourself plenty of time to get to your destination

The more rushed you are, the less tolerant you will be of other drivers around you. If you ensure you have plenty of time to get to your destination, you are less likely to engage in unkind behaviours such as tailgating or beeping your horn!

2. Use your indicators

Using your indicators to tell those around you your intentions not only helps prevent accidents, but is a kind gesture towards other drivers. It is a simple courtesy that is not used often enough!

3. Allow other cars to merge into traffic

We are all trying to get somewhere, and quite often we are short on time but by allowing space for another driver to pull in, in front of you, that driver may be inspired to do the same for someone else, which in turn allows traffic to flow more smoothly.

4. Don't take it personally

There will always be inconsiderate (and sometimes just rude) drivers on the road. That person who cut in front of you or gave you a rude gesture for their mistake may well be the nicest person you'll meet when off the road. We all know our behaviour changes based on situations or mood so you don't know what the other driver's situation is; they could be rushing to care for a sick child or just received some terrible news. Try to let it go and don't react to others' less-than-kind actions.

5. Smile at other drivers

A smile really can go a long way... you'll catch others off guard if you return their frowns with a genuine smile. A simple smile can brighten even the grumpiest drivers' day.